WHAT IS A DEDUCTIBLE?

The amount you owe for health care services before your health insurance plan begins to pay your medical bills.

What does a deductible mean to you?

A deductible means that before your insurance company pays for any of your health services at any doctor's office, you have to meet a certain amount of payment. The actual deductible depends on your specific insurance coverage and everyone's is different. We do not know what your deductible is.

If I pay my copayment, do I still have to pay something to see the doctor?

It depends on your insurance plan. Some insurances have a copay, deductible, and coinsurance. Some insurance plans have a $0 deductible whereas others have a $1,000+ deductible. If you have a $1,000 deductible, you have to pay this in full through different medical services before your insurance company will start to fully pay for your medical services. This would get billed to you, not paid in the office.

When the front receptionist tells me that "insurance covers the visit" or "I'm in network", what does this mean?

This means your insurance company and our office have a contract to see you at a discounted rate. However, this does NOT mean that you do not have to pay anything. All deductibles and copays still apply. This means the insurance company will not fully pay for your visit until you have fully paid and met your deductible and out of pocket. If you do have a deductible or coinsurance payment you will receive a statement at home.

Can Flatiron/Breezy Point Dermatology check my deductible?

Technically yes, however it is better when the patients themselves call their insurance and speak to someone about their own insurance as they do not always give us the most accurate information. The staff will check your insurance to confirm that we are in network with your insurance, however, the staff is not responsible for telling you the amount of your deductible or how much of it you have met. This information is impossible to determine accurately and we do not want to be responsible for giving you inaccurate information.

I acknowledge that Flatiron/Breezy Point Dermatology cannot accurately check my deductible. I understand that I may have to pay for all or a portion of my visit. I am responsible for any deductible I may have based upon the insurance policy I have.
